Dance teachers wear many hats. We are educators, choreographers, mentors, directors, artists, coach coordinators, decision-makers, advocates, and LEADERS. As dance educators, we may not always identify ourselves as leaders. We may think that only those with certain job titles, qualifications, or in select sectors qualify for the title.

At NDEO's 2023 National Conference, Teaching is Leading: Embracing Our Impact and Opportunity as Dance Educators, we invite you to explore the diverse ways you lead in the classroom, the studio, your community, and elsewhere. Regardless of which setting we teach in or where we are in our career, dance teachers constantly guiding, managing, developing, advocating, directing, creating, and communicating. We set standards for our classes; we build relationships with students, parents, and administrators; we overcome obstacles for the sake of our programs and advocate for dance and demonstrate its tremendous impact through our teaching. This year in Denver, we come together to explore and make the implicit explicit. If you are a dance teacher, join us as we raise respect for the field of dance education and make the implicit explicit. If you are a dance teacher, join us as we raise respect for the field of dance education and make the implicit explicit.
